THREE NEW TAXES FOR 62 MILLION DOLLARS PROPOSED

For Increased State Aid For Schools and Alleviation of Real Estate Burden

AT EDUCATION ASS'N.

Former Bucks County Man Is Chairman of Committee On Imposts

HARRISBURG, Dec. 27.—(INS)—Three new taxes designed to yield $62,000,000 annually for increased state aid for schools and alleviation of the tax burden on real estate were among the many proposals before the convention of the Pennsylvania State Education Association today.

The new imposts, recommended by a committee of which Dr. Carmon Ross, president of the association, was chairman, were:

A general one percent retail sales tax to yield $24,000,000; a personal income tax to raise $8,000,000 and a franchise tax on business to yield $30,000,000.

An amendment of the state constitution to provide for the election of the state superintendent of public instruction rather than appointment by the Governor as at present was urged in the report of the committee on legislation which stated such a change would remove "the office" from the hazards of partisan politics.

Revision of the State's child labor laws to conform with provisions of the NRA also was recommended by the committee, of which Charles S. Davis, of Steelton, was chairman.

This committee further urged that the 1935 assembly make a deficiency appropriation of $5,000,000 to meet salary obligations under the Edmonds act; an appropriation to continue emergency aid to needy districts; deficiency appropriations for vocational and special education, and create a special fund to equalize educational opportunities in poorer school districts.

A modern constitution to eliminate "ox cart" government was also recommended.

Reorganization of school districts on the so-called "community" basis was recommended by a committee of 24 educators of which Dr. Ross also was chairman.

The plan proposed that "community" school districts be organized around present high school centers or natural community centers. County executive committees would be named to recommend regroupings and reorganizations of school districts on "community" or county bases to be submitted for local option at the November, 1936, election. Special financial inducements to be offered school districts to speed reorganization.

Commenting on this report, Dr. James N. Rule, state superintendent of public instruction, told district school superintendents:

"The suggestion primarily is a move to place the administration of school districts on a higher plane of self-administration. It is no manner constitutes a denial of local self-government but aims to protect it through making it really efficient."

Dr. A. D. Thomas, superintendent of the Hazleton schools, and Ben G. Graham, Pittsburgh superintendent, were nominated to succeed Dr. Ross as President. The election will be held this afternoon.

M. H. Thomas, superintendent of Harrisburg schools, and Dr. James Herbert Kelley, Harrisburg, were unopposed for vice-president and Pennsylvania Director of the NEA, respectively.

Bids for next year's convention were presented by Harrisburg and Scranton.

REPORT INQUIRER SOLD TO NEW GROUP

Lansdale Paper Publishes The Story That Strassburger and Beamish Are Purchasers

WAS MADE IN PARIS

It is reported in quarters sufficiently informed to lend color to the story that the Philadelphia Inquirer has been bought by Ralph Beaver Strassburger and Richard J. Beamish, until last October Secretary of the Commonwealth under Governor Pinchot. This statement is published by the North Penn Reporter at Lansdale.

The story in the North Penn Reporter continues:

The sale is supposed to have been consummated during Mr. Beamish's recent hurried trip to Europe, when he is supposed to have carried on the negotiations with Eleanor Elverson Patenotre, who became sole owner of the property under the will of her father, James Elverson, Sr., on the death early in 1929 of her brother, James Elverson, Jr., who managed the property for many years after his father's demise.

Mrs. Patenotre personally supervised the publication for a short time, and then startled Philadelphia and its environs, in 1930, by announcing the sale of the newspaper to Cyrus H. K. Curtis, for a sum said to total, including the real estate, close to $20,000,000.

Mr. Curtis turned it over to the Curtis-Martin Newspapers, Inc., which also published the Public Ledger, and placed John C. Martin in charge of the management.

When Mr. Curtis died in 1933 the newspapers were segregated from the rest of the estate under the management of Mr. Martin, who subsequently consolidated the morning issue of the Public Ledger with the Inquirer.

It was reported at the time that the consolidation was an emergency measure brought about by the fact that Mr. Martin, because of the depression condition of business as reflected in the business of all newspapers, was finding it difficult to meet the terms of payment set forth in the sale agreement between the Curtis interests and Mrs. Patenotre.

This condition became acute last fall, and the property was formally returned to Mrs. Patenotre.

It has been reported from time to time that Mr. Strassburger wished to enter the Philadelphia newspaper field and he was said at one time to have a considerable interest in the Philadelphia Record, which, it is understood, he subsequently disposed of.

Strassburger, who has been the owner of the Norristown Times Herald for more than a decade, has also been tied up in various rumors with Beamish since the Record passed from Wanamaker control.

Mr. Beamish, who is a veteran news man, it is understood, will have active charge of the Inquirer when the new owners set to work.

He resigned as Secretary of the Commonwealth last October to take the stump for Earle and Guffey, and has been mentioned prominently as a possible selection for Commissioner of Insurance in Governor Earle's cabinet.

One report as to the purchase of the newspaper property by Messrs. Strassburger and Beamish is that they will undertake to carry out the remainder of the contract which Mr. Martin found impracticable when he returned the property to Mrs. Patenotre.

This graphic photo shows scene of the tragic train wreck near Dundas, Ont., which resulted when a Canadian National Railway holiday special was struck by a Detroit-Montreal flyer as it stood on a siding. The locomotive of the flyer wedged into a coach of the special. At least 18 were killed and 30 injured in the tragedy.

COW MOTHER OF TRIPLETS DOWN IN BENSEALEM

New Arrivals To Be Named After Three of Santa's Reindeer

AN UNIQUE EVENT

There is a surplus of calves down in Bensalem Township and whether they are to be ploughed under or not has not yet been determined. The surplus is on the farm of Stanley Becker, where a cow gave birth to triplets on Christmas eve.

Old Santa arrived at the Becker farm and gave the proud mother cow, Daisy, a five year old Guernsey who helps supply milk for the farm, three healthy children.

And because the calves arrived Christmas eve they are to be named after Santa's reindeer. The two sisters, both a red brown in color, are to be named Dancer and Prancer, while their white, brown-spotted brother is to be called Dasher.

What chances they have of living up to their names is something else again. They appeared very wobbly on their legs today as they stood in a box stall with their mother.

But Daisy didn't mind. She licked each with her rough tongue as they came near and cast a suspicious eye on all strangers.

J. Morris Smith, who manages the farm for Becker, said he could not recall hearing of triplets before. Becker is in California at present and does not know yet of the new arrivals.

"They are fine, healthy calves," Smith said, "and I believe all of them will live."

Dr. John Homiller, Hatboro veterinarian, declared that in his 18 years of experience he has heard of only one other case of triplets. In that instance, he said, only one of the calves lived.

"It is very unusual," Dr. Homiller said, "and I believe the chances for such an occurrence are only about one in 1000 and the chances of all three living are about one in 2000."

There have been cases of quadruplets and even quintuplets, but they are very, very rare."

Smith said he did not know whether all three of the calves would be kept. The principal crop on the farm, he said, is garden produce and two extra cows and a bull would constitute "something of a surplus."

Valentine Steinhauer, 83, Dies at Home of Niece

Valentine Steinhauer, 83, uncle of Mrs. William Wilkie, River Road, Crofton, died yesterday after a short illness. The deceased was stricken early yesterday morning and died within a few hours.

Mr. Steinhauer was a native of Germany and for several years lived in Philadelphia. Later he moved to Crofton with his niece, where he had made his home for the past several years.

Funeral services will be held Saturday afternoon from a funeral home at 300 East Girard avenue, Philadelphia, at two o'clock. Friends may call Friday evening.

Struck By Automobile As He Crosses Highway

TO CONFER WITH BETTY GOW

Flemington, N. J., Dec. 27.—The first official conference of prosecuting officials with Miss Betty Gow, pretty former Lindbergh nurse, was scheduled to be held today, it was learned by I. N. S. Although the same secrecy which attended her arrival in New York from Scotland Tuesday surrounded her, it was learned she was to be taken from the Morrow home in Englewood, to the State House in Trenton to be questioned by Attorney General David T. Wilentz and other members of the prosecuting staff. A stenographer will record her statement. She will be questioned in great detail about the sleeping suit Baby Lindbergh wore the night of March 1, 1932, when he was snatched from the nursery. Miss Gow sewed thumb guards on that suit. The dark-haired nurse also will be asked to tell in detail anything she can remember about the movements around the Lindbergh mansion at Hopewell the last day the baby was seen alive. She is the last known person to see the child alive. Officials refused to say whether she would be brought here to view Bruno Richard Hauptmann who is scheduled to go on trial for the slaying January 2nd.

Temperature Drops To 20 Here; Very Low in Mid-West

With the temperature locally dropping to 20 degrees above zero, and a brisk breeze blowing, the cold snap that had been promised for the past few days arrived during the night.

Ponds and streams, where ice had been weakened by the warmer weather of the past few days, found their coatings thickened, and to the glee of the lovers of skating much strengthened.

A numbing sub-zero cold wave, most intense of the winter, spread death and suffering today over the northern mid-continent states.

With temperatures ranging as low as 39 degrees below zero, at Eveleth, Minn., the widespread frigid wave, however, was due to ease up late today only to be followed by another sub-zero spell.

The frigid wave prevailed from Montana to Indiana and from Canada as far south as Missouri.

Deaths due to the cold wave reached two score. While several persons froze to death others were killed in accidents on icy streets and highways.

Four persons died in Chicago as a result of the cold, and seven lives were snuffed out in suburban Harvey when icy pavement and poor visibility caused an automobile-train crash. Twelve died in Illinois as a direct result of the cold.

Cold blasts of winter struck Pennsylvania today with temperatures hitting new lows for the season. In many points sub-zero weather prevailed in mountain areas and the mercury generally was below freezing. An unofficial low of 4 degrees below was registered, in the Pittsburgh district. In the northwestern section of the Commonwealth, lows of 10 below were reported from many places.

BUILT PLATFORM TO FIT TRAIN BUT NOT ROOM

(By "The Stroller")

Santa Claus certainly had a busy time in a certain Bristol residence on Christmas eve.

Santa arrived with a streamlined train for a youthful member of the household. Anticipating the arrival of the train the father of the lad worked industriously for several days building a platform upon which to mount the tracks. Now streamlined trains do not take the same degree of curve as other trains, so the train was carefully measured and the platform built accordingly.

The platform was constructed at the father's place of business and then taken to the home at the proper time only to find that it was too large to be taken into the room. Hastily scurrying around a smaller train was purchased and the platform cut to fit the room and the new train set.

MOTHER OF NINE CHILDREN DIES AFTER ACCIDENT

Mrs. Stanley Huckman, 41, Riegelsville, is Fatally Injured in Crash

CAR STRUCK BY TRAIN

Sat on Seat Beside Husband Who Was Only Slightly Injured

A mother of nine children died this morning in St. Luke's Hospital, Bethlehem, of internal injuries sustained in an automobile accident last night when the car in which she was riding was struck by a Reading Railway train at West 3rd street crossing, Bethlehem.

The victim was Mrs. Stanley Huckman, 41, Riegelsville.

Mrs. Huckman and her husband, who is a farmer, left their home yesterday morning and drove to Shonerville, Lehigh County, where they spent the day with Mr. Huckman's parents.

After enjoying the day the couple left Shonerville early last evening and were driving to their home when the accident occurred. Mr. Huckman was at the wheel of the car and his wife sat beside him on the front seat. It is said that the Huckman machine was going east and that the gate on the west side of the crossing was not down. Huckman drove onto the tracks then it is alleged the gates were lowered and he was trapped on the tracks.

Huckman was stunned and was treated at a nearby hotel. His wife was taken to the hospital where it was first thought she was suffering from a fracture of the ribs. Later during the night it was found that the woman was internally injured and she died this morning at 5.45.

The wreckage of the Huckman car was carried 25 feet according to reports.

John Seager, 45, 21 Muhlenburg street, Allentown, and Robert Krazt, 43, Allentown, were slightly injured early last evening when the car in which they were riding crashed into a highway barricade on the Bethlehem Pike at the intersection of the Dublin and Souderton roads. The car then struck Wilson Frank, Souderton, highway employee, who was lighting red lanterns on the barricade.

Seager was driving and was held in $500 bail for court charged with operating a motor vehicle while intoxicated. He was given a hearing before a Sellersville justice of peace.

Krazt was taken to the Grandview Hospital where it is stated his injuries are not serious.

Steals Rifle From Auto Of State Highway Patrol

State Highway Patrolman Irvin L. Rothermel, of the Doylestown sub-station of State Police, made an unusual offer today to a thief who stole a valuable 22-caliber Mauser rifle from his automobile while parked on Court street, below Hamilton, Doylestown, between 7 and 8 o'clock Christmas night.

"Tell the thief for me," Patrolman Rothermel said "that the rifle is sighted in for target shooting at 50 yards, and if he will come down to the highway Patrol barracks on North Main street, I will give him the other peep-sight, which is missing from the rifle. It's a shame the thief doesn't have the whole thing."

Rothermel, who has been attached to the Highway Patrol at Doylestown for several years, is a crack pistol and rifle shot, and a member of the state team that represented the Patrol in shoots throughout Pennsylvania and other states.

The thief, who will not be cordially received "when" he returns the rifle.

COL. AYRES' PROPHECY

Colonel Ayres, the Cleveland economist, thinks prosperity may come back with a rush, because the disuse of machines and the advance of invention during the depression has left industry in dire need of a vast amount of refitting. He sets the potential demand for this sort of "durable goods" at $55,000,000,000.

He probably is right. The "consumption goods" industries already are running at an increasingly satisfactory rate, earning money and building up credit against the time when plant improvement will be in order. Full recovery very well might come, as Colonel Ayres appears to think, with a great burst of investment in new labor-saving machinery and the setting of new records in efficient, economical production.

The way to bring this about, in his opinion, is to abolish the NRA entirely, in the interests of promoting confidence. It is an opinion of the situation that seems to be gaining daily in adherents, though significantly, the consumption goods industries themselves in a recent report advocated retaining the NRA with no changes whatever. This makes it difficult for an onlooker to take sides on the question, for everybody would be glad to see the speedy distribution of that $55,000,000,000 worth of durable goods business.

However, just as a reminder, we would ask the distinguished Cleveland economist: What has become of the old-fashioned fellow who used to sit up at night to worry about technological unemployment? Can we take it as assured now that all those new labor-saving machines may be absorbed by industry unaided, without incurring a new case of economic colic?

$2,500 A YEAR

Dr. Mordecai Ezekiel reports that an annual income of $2,500 is necessary if the American family is to lead a "moderately full life."

Yet even in the best years prior to 1929, only 30 per cent of American families had incomes of that figure. One-fourth of the national income was spread over 60 per cent of American families, and another fourth was divided among one and one-fourth per cent.

Where Dr. Ezekiel errs—and millions in the lower income brackets agree—is in assuming that there is an invariable ratio between income and the human spirit. The term "moderately full life" implies much which will never be purchasable. For that, humanity may well be thankful.

In science and medicine, Americans won four out of five Nobel prizes without buying a ticket on an English derby.

Sheriff's Sale of Real Estate

By virtue of a writ of Fieri Facias to me directed, will be sold at public sale, on Friday, the 4th day of January, 1935 at 11 o'clock A. M., at the Sheriff's Office, in the Borough of Doylestown, Bucks County, Pa., the following real estate, to wit:

ALL THAT CERTAIN Messuage and Lot of land, with the buildings and improvements thereon erected, SITUATE in the First Ward of the Borough of Bristol, County of Bucks and State of Pennsylvania, BOUNDED and DESCRIBED, according to a survey thereof made by Charles Henry Moon, surveyor, on September 19, 1928, as follows:—

BEGINNING at a point on the Western side of Mill Street forty and eighty-eight one-hundredths feet North from the corner of Wood Street, thence by land formerly of W. Harry Smith and now of William M. Downing South thirty-seven degrees forty-four minutes twenty-five seconds West one hundred ten and seven-tenths feet to a corner of remaining lands of Minnie Weissblatt, thence by the same North 52 degrees thirty-five seconds West twenty-two and six-tenths feet to a corner in the line of land formerly of George L. Horn and now of Louis Dries, thence by the same premises North thirty-seven degrees twenty-nine minutes twenty-five seconds East one hundred ten and seven-tenths feet to a point on the Western side of Mill Street aforesaid and thence along the same South fifty-two degrees thirty-five seconds East twenty-three and eight one-hundredths feet to the place of beginning.

The improvements are a three-story brick store building 20 x 34 feet with a two-story brick end attached 20 x 42 feet containing three rooms on the first floor and five rooms and bath on the second floor and three rooms and bath on the third floor.

Seized and taken in execution as the property of Frank Weissblatt and Clara Weissblatt, his wife, and to be sold by

HORACE E. GWINNER, Sheriff.

HOWARD I. JAMES, Attorney.

Sheriff's Office, Doylestown, Pa., December 19th, 1934.

"Why—as I remember, it was a haunting sort of thing. It stayed with you. It wasn't especially dramatic—that is, exciting, as I remember, but strong just the same, and beautiful."

He nodded. "Exactly. And that's Warren's style. He's a strange chap himself. He stays with you, too. Not the kind you'd forget."

"BEACH BEAUTY" by ARTHUR SHUMWAY

CHAPTER XXXVII

It was three hours later, back in Kay's house in Daytona Beach, that the conference began. Pete, Kay and Spike sat sipping hot coffee while Harrow did most of the talking.

"I thoroughly appreciate your point of view, Ryan," he said to Pete. "And I'm naturally more grateful than I can tell you that you had the sense to follow us this morning. I'd no idea things would turn out as they have." He made a little gesture with his head toward the nearby window which was washed with a blinding rain driven by a wind that threatened to smash the glass. "And, of course, I'd no way of knowing we'd have any trouble with Kay's boat. Captain Johnson did and he said plenty, but neither Spike nor I would listen to him. Well... we've learned a lesson in seamanship. And maybe in something else. I wouldn't be surprised."

"You know, of course, why all this was done. Well, fortunately no one was injured and the plan carried through despite our rashness. The papers have their stories and the news is on the wire. No one is any the wiser about Kay. She rescued us and lost her boat doing so. Her picture will be plastered everywhere. Spike will see to that."

Spike sat without speaking. He was chewing on one of his cigars, nodding now and then at Harrow and glaring from time to time at Pete. It was easy to see that he had only suspicion and dislike for him.

"Yeah, I'm handling that," Spike admitted sourly.

"Now, we've had a great many misunderstandings, Ryan," Harrow continued, "but for my part, I'm convinced that you're all right—more than all right. Anything I've said about you in the past I take back. And I assure you, whether you believe me or not, that I had nothing to do with your being put on the spot. All I can believe is that you walked into some hair-trigger mugs who thought you were a policeman or one of us. Kay's told you all about the situation here. It's been tense. Our nerves have been on edge. I hope you see that."

Pete nodded.

"You're tremendously fond of Kay," Harrow said. "I don't blame you. So am I. Another thing I want you to believe is that I have her best interests at heart. Especially from now on, because now she's a business investment to me. Her chance is my gamble and can be my gain. You can understand that."

"Now, I'm going to make a proposition. Kay is supposed to leave here to go to North Carolina to visit her family. We—my party—are supposed to leave on the boat, to go north. The Havana cruise is off. We don't need to give any explanation to the Campbells."

"Very well, what really happens is this: Spike and I get aboard the boat. But we go only as far as Jacksonville. Then we meet you and Kay and the four of us fly to New York."

Kay looked with surprise from Harrow to Pete. Obviously, Pete was too puzzled to think clearly. And, obviously, Spike was much displeased.

"I want you to come along," Harrow said. "That is if you want to give up your truck company job. I'm sure I can use you in New York, anybody who can flatten Spike here and who's so obviously got Kay's interests uppermost in his mind."

Spike growled something.

"Bog pardon?" Harrow said pleasantly.

"Nothing."

"You said something."

"How do you expect a guy to handle himself like a flyweight when he's fished out of the drink soaking wet and all fagged out?" Spike complained.

"Perfectly true. But you were very good at that. No disgrace, now, Spike."

Spike returned to his silence and smoked his cigar stub.

"What do you think, Ryan?" Harrow asked.

"Then I'll come," Pete declared. Spike sighed faintly.

Harrow rose and offered his hand to Pete.

"Then, bygones are bygones, and from now on we're all on the level with each other and business is business."

Pete found himself liking this man he had hated. There was at once a calmness, a jauntness, and an air of rigid sincerity in that lean, tanned face with its boulevardier's mustache, it's shrewd, tired eyes. He put his hand forward.

"Absolutely," he said.

That night the Daytona Beach paper had a headlined story telling of the explosion and the rescue. Pete's part being left out. Harrow was quoted as saying that racketeers who had followed him from New York evidently had put a time bomb aboard his boat and that, if Miss Owen hadn't been cruising about "at the inlet," the lives of all the party might have been lost. The Harrow party had abandoned its plan for a tropical cruise and was returning at once to New York, the repairs on the yacht to be made in Jacksonville.

Kay was bewildered, anxious and happy, but not at all frightened. Whatever was happening was unavoidable and decidedly interesting. It was the sort of thing she had yearned for—adventure, change, excitement, a touch of the bizarre. And now that there seemed to be an understanding between Harrow and Pete, and she was no longer obliged to choose between them and to let her emotions enter into their relationship. She was no longer in a false position; whatever happened would happen and that would be that.

So the next day the Commander III, with due ceremony, left Daytona Beach and headed north in the river channel. Kay watched from her dock as the boat's white beauty silhouette against the green shore of the mainland. How much had happened since first she saw that lovely white boat lying alongside the city dock. She laughed softly to herself when she remembered that her first feeling had been one of anger toward the skipper who had taken her to the place usually reserved for the Kaye. And the Kaye—on the bottom of the ocean. But Harrow had drawn a check to cover the loss. She was keeping the check for a few days, before cashing it, as a memento of the pleasure she had known for years in the little boat.

She and Pete spent a quiet evening together, dropped into a movie and rode up and down the beach in a borrowed car. The beach was smooth and hard from the storm and the night was soft and clear. It was only then that Kay began to feel a regret for having to leave Daytona Beach.

She pressed Pete's hand on the wheel.

"What, baby?" he asked softly.

"Some day," she said, "when I really am settled down and I know what I want or I've had it, this is the place for me. I love it. It must have been born in me."

"Here, too," Pete said solemnly. There was a pause and he said, "And maybe some day."

He hesitated until she nudged him. "Some day what?"

"Nothing. I was dreaming."

"It's your privilege," Kay said softly. "And it's about the most fun in life, isn't it?"

"About," he agreed.

He leaned over and kissed her ear which the wind, streaming through her hair, had uncovered.

Kay sighed and moved closer to him. She didn't know what was ahead, but she did know that she was very happy, especially at this moment.

Next day Kay rose before dawn to take the early morning train to Jacksonville. Pete had left already by bus. Breakfasting alone in the kitchen, she felt strange in the quiet dark house for the last time in her life.

She knew that when she crossed the threshold, her bag in hand, a completely new life would begin. Airplanes... New York... the theater... publicity... maybe happiness, certainly adventure of the sort that seemed to her most thrilling.

Finally she heard the "taxi,"

CATHOLIC BOYS' CLUB EARNS 34-24 VICTORY

A strong second half finish by the Catholic Boys' Club earned them a 34-24 victory over the white Elephants last night on the Beaver Fire Company basketball court. The Elephants were leading the Boys' Club by one point at the half-time whistle.

It wasn't the fault of "Ray" Hughes that the Pkers were beaten for Hughes was sinking them from all angles of the court. Eight times this stellar guard rung the loop for tw pointers and it was his shooting which kept the Elephants in the lead during the first half.

The playing of the Gallagher boys gave the Catholic Club the triumph. Besides their wonderful defensive work, these youths amassed twenty points between them and led the second half attack on the Elephants with their long shots.

In the preliminary game, the Catholic Boys' Club Reserves eked out a close victory over the White Elephants, beating the boys from downtown, 17-11. The Elephants were better marksmen from the foul line but the Catholic team did their best shooting from the floor.

MADE IT STRIP POKER

BOSTON — (INS) — It was not "strip poker" until holdup men came. The game was on at 3 a. m. in Cambridge, when three hold-up men, who had previously drained the gasoline from an automobile parked outside, to forestall pursuit, entered the building and took the players' trousers and $72.

FIREMEN CALLED AWAY

WELLESLEY, Mass. — (INS) — Time out was called at the Firemen's Ball here when an alarm came from Wellesley College. Firemen attired in full dress and boiled shirts, left the dance to put out the fire. After their work was done the brave fire laddies went back to their partners and continued the dance.

Mr. and Mrs. William Ewing and daughters, the Misses Anna and Mary Ewing, Cedar street, were guests over Christmas of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Watchorn, Burlington, N. J.

SUNDAY DINNER SUGGESTIONS

By ANN PAGE

THE Sunday dinner between Christmas and New Year's will probably be a modest one in most homes. Lamb, veal, and pork are somewhat cheaper than they have been and any one of them offers good value. Beef remains rather high. Green vegetables are much higher so that potatoes, other root vegetables and salad greens are good choices.

Oranges, Navel oranges, grapefruit, apples and bananas are plentiful and relatively cheap. Use them for desserts, salads and fruit cocktails as well as breakfast fruits.

Oysters, salt and smoked fish make moderately priced fish dinners.

Here are three menus, including a New Year's dinner, made up from seasonable foods:

Low Cost Dinner

Roast Shoulder of Pork
Boiled Rice Creamed Onions
Bread and Butter
Apple Betty

Medium Cost Dinner

Roast Lamb Browned Potatoes
Carrots and Peas
Bread and Butter
Jellied Apple Sauce

New Year's Dinner

Fruit Cup or Clear Soup
Celery Carrot Sticks
Roast Fresh Ham Glazed Apples
Mashed Potatoes Yellow Turnips
Spinach Vinaigrette
Rolls and Butter

Frozen Fruit Pudding
Coffee
Wafers

were a little off form but seem confident of breaking the winning streak of the Philadelphia team tonight.

The best showing last week was made by the St. Ann's team. This club rolled up a total of 44 points against the Croydon Gaels and scored an easy triumph. Manager Spadacino feels confident that his team will take over the undefeated Recreation five.

NEW YEAR'S

Who is this peeping thru
The open door, so sweet and shy?
He is so tiny, and clean, and new?
Why, he's slipped down from the sky.

Open the door, bid him enter,
Make him welcome, do not err;

Spread a feast, and bid him eat,
Be quite fair and he'll not cheat.

He's only a baby and babies are love,
He's really and truly a gift from above;
Let's love one another all through the year,
And a year from tonight, we'll be free of all fear.

ANNE BARRETT.

1,200 PCT. INTEREST

BELGRADE — (INS) — Vladimir Bogdanovitch, of Veles, was fined $10,000 for "usury." He was caught lending money to peasants at rates of interest varying from 600 per cent. to 1,200 per cent. One man, to whom he had lent $100 a year ago, has already repaid $1,000—but he was still being pressed to pay back more than $150.

SOFIA — (INS) — Five blind people arranged a successful elopement in Sofia. Blind Georgo Dimitroff, 20, fell in love with Mara Vezenkova, 20, daughter of a wealthy Sofia family. Parental approval was refused—so, with the aid of four blind friends, Georgo and Mara eloped and were married.
